1|Presented materials really well.Would be helpful to have a review before a midterm and not have a full class. Also would be helpful to go over problem sets.

1|Ian was an excellent course instructor. He explained things very clearly, asked questions to provoke participation, and made sure that all questions the students had were answered. He was especially good with the whiteboard drawing program used to enhance the learning experience with drawing during lectures. If anything, I would suggest asking more questions during class to get people to chime in and see if they could get them right. He did during most classes anyway though. Very good course.

1|Quick responses from the instructor regarding any questions on technology support matters. Any improvements that I would suggest would be for BU website/blackboard stuff that applies for all courses.

1|N/A

1|A.The operation is very simple.

1|Challenging but stimulating.

1|This course felt like a very appropriate introduction into the subject matter. The units were also streamlined and the knowledge built on itself well from one unit to the next. An improvement I would suggest would be to have more involvement with a textbook. Often I would look for answers in the 'suggested' text and have trouble finding them.

1|A. the course teaches how individuals and firms interact in markets to determine the allocation of resources; provides an introduction to microeconomic thinking and methods. Throughout the course, students can apply these methods toward contemporary, policy relevant economic issues.

1|A.I loved how Ian prepared the course materials.
